Observers Certain Ike's Name Due To Appear In New Hampshire Poll

Paris Hears General To Remain Mum

Sunday Statement May Quiet Present Turmoil In GOP

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—(INS)—Political observers were "certain" Saturday that the name of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower will be included in the March 11 New Hampshire Republican primary as a presidential candidate.

This is expected to be the "important announcement" Sen. Lodge R-Mass., has promised to make at a press conference Sunday. Lodge is chairman of the campaign to name Eisenhower as the GOP nominee.

A tipoff on the general's plans, which may well split the Republicans wide open, came from Paris.

The general's close friends predicted Friday night that Eisenhower will agree to the entry of his name in the New Hampshire primary, the first to be held in the United States.

While offering it as their private opinion that the general would acquiesce in the submission of his name, these friends say the general is not likely to make a positive declaration in the near future. They are waiting for the entry of his name in any primary nor will he campaign.

GENERAL "IKE" is said to be pursuing the same strategy attributed to him several weeks ago. At that time, he reportedly decided not to enter the race formally at the present moment either through declaring himself available or by expressing a party preference.

Instead, he was represented as being determined to remain in Europe until early next summer, if necessary, in order to push his mission of organizing the defense of Western Europe.

That is said to be his position today although he probably has not ruled out the possibility that events may enable him to break his silence before he planned or that he might find it necessary to return home earlier.

Sen. Taft (R-Ohio), who had expected to win the GOP nomination easily if Eisenhower should withdraw, meanwhile declined to address the Republican National Committee in San Francisco Jan. 17-19.

Taft reportedly objected to a similar invitation to Lodge to speak as chairman of the Eisenhower-for-president group, on grounds that the general has neither declared himself a Republican or a candidate.

In Washington, a spokesman for Taft declared that it would be no surprise to the Ohio senator if Eisenhower allows his name to go into the New Hampshire primary. The spokesman said:

"When Sen. Taft opened his campaign last fall he expected to run against Eisenhower. He has always expected the general to be a candidate."

THE OTHER announced candidates, besides Taft, are Harold E. Stassen and Gov. Earl Warren of California. Their entry has added to the Republican turmoil, with Stassen moving into Ohio in an attempt to win a few delegates from "Mr. Republican" in his own state.

Stassen also announced he would actively campaign in Pennsylvania and Minnesota, where Taft forces are hard at work.

Sen. Douglas, (D Ill.), told a radio audience Friday night that he was a great admirer of Eisenhower, but expressed doubt that the general would be available as a Democratic Party candidate.

Douglas said the Democrats should nominate Sen. Kefauver (D-Tenn.) and added: "There is one Southerner we Northerners can go for."

Message Booked

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—(INS)—President Truman will deliver his annual State of the Union message to a joint session of Congress at 12:30 p. m. Wednesday.

MRS. JOE WILLIE RILEY, Gold Star Mother of Chicago, holds induction notice ordering her to appear before a local draft board Jan. 9 and wonders what the defense department has in store for her. She first received a notice a year ago and called the draft board to say it was all a mistake as she was a "middle aged" mother. In the Spring she was classified I-A. On Dec. 23 she got "greetings" from the President. Mrs. Riley had a son, S/Sgt. William Riley, 20, whose photo she holds. He was a B-17 waist gunner and was killed in 1943 after winning 13 medals.

4-DAY CONFERENCE READIED

Arrival Of Churchill In Washington Awaited

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—(INS)—British Prime Minister Winston Churchill, past master at personal diplomacy, was due in Washington Saturday to renew his close wartime ties with the President of the United States.

President Truman arranged brief, simple welcoming ceremonies at National Airport.

He sent the presidential plane Independence to New York where Churchill was scheduled to arrive aboard the Queen Mary.

Four days of conferences on virtually every important problem facing the world were planned in Blair House.

The list of subjects Mr. Truman and Churchill are expected to discuss range from atomic weapons to relations with Russia, from the Korean War and armistice talks to the defense of the West.

THE VISIT is Churchill's first in an official capacity since his several trips to talk things over with the late President Roosevelt during World War II.

In a recent broadcast to Britain, Churchill said his object in coming here now is to lay the basis for working together with American leaders "easily and intimately."

President Truman's advisers were generally optimistic the conferences would lead to a better understanding between the British and American governments.

Few believed Mr. Truman and Churchill would ever work together as did Churchill and President Roosevelt.

It was pointed out Mr. Truman works with and through his staff to a far greater extent than Mr. Roosevelt.

At the same time, Mr. Truman is believed ready to assure the British leader he places as high a value on closest possible Anglo-American cooperation as Churchill does, and is ready to do his part in any practical way, just so it will not prejudice close associations with other Allied countries, particularly members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Following the Blair House luncheon and conference, the two men accompanied by a small group of advisers, go aboard the President's yacht Williamsburg for a cruise on the Potomac.

Daytonian Seeks U.S. Presidency
DAYTON, Jan. 5.—(P)—Paul Klier, 35-year-old soft drink factory worker, has announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for President.

The six-foot, blond, Klier came to Dayton three months ago from California, where he said he had been an organizer for St. Paul's Missionary Co. His platform:

1. Concentrate on a high level of employment at home as opposed to a policy of foreign intervention;
2. Education for all at all levels;
3. Return more of the money earned from factories and farms for expansion and rehabilitation;
4. Bring God into public life.

Crippled Vessel Now Under Tow

Serappy Skipper Of Enterprise Still Refuses To Leave Ship

LONDON, Jan. 5.—(INS)—The British Tug Turmoil took Captain Henrik Kurt Carlsen's battered SS Flying Enterprise in tow Saturday and the ships began moving cautiously toward the safety of Falmouth harbor, 310 miles to the northeast.

A London spokesman for the Isbrandtsen Line, operator of the 6,100-ton freighter, said the completion of the towing hookup by just two men was "one of the miracles of modern towing and salvage history."

One of the men is Captain Carlsen who ordered crewmen and passengers off the storm-beaten ship last Saturday and maintained a heroic, lonely vigil until Friday. Then he was joined by the second man, Kenneth Roger Dancy, a Scot crewman of the Turmoil, who leaped to the slippery, sloping deck of the Flying Enterprise.

But the spokesman said the "toughest part is still to come" before the hoped-for happy climax to one of the most stirring sea stories in maritime history can be written.

500 Dopers Are Nabbed

U.S. Agents Press Narcotics Raids

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—(P)—Federal agents prowled through the sinister narcotics underworld Saturday, seeking even bigger game than any of the 500 suspected dope peddlers already seized in a sweeping nationwide dragnet.

Narcotics Commissioner Harry J. Anslinger said the roundup, which started before dawn Friday and continued around the clock, is laying the groundwork for capture of some of the nation's biggest illicit drug dealers.

About 100 federal agents and 200 government-paid informers are remaining underground to continue the cleanup, he said. Scores had to give up their roles of danger and intrigue to make the arrests and appear in court with evidence.

Anslinger said illicit drug traffic has been dealt a crippling blow. The drive is aimed especially at suppliers of teen-age drug addicts. An alarming increase in drug addiction among youths "has been halted," the narcotics chief said. He added about 50 of those arrested were women.

The raids started in San Antonio, Texas, and spread with precision timing to most of the big cities across the country. About 100 peddlers were caught in Texas alone, 50 in New York, 50 in Philadelphia, and 30 in Washington.

Besides regular narcotics agents, the undercover men include informers, called "special employees," who get paid for every conviction they produce—the bigger the dealer caught the more the pay.

Mom Uses Dad As 'Threat' For Kiddies

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—(P)—A child psychologist says that in too many American homes "fathers are just something mothers threaten their children with."

The psychologist, Dr. Martin L. Reymert, said that he wishes American mothers would stop telling their children:

"Just wait until Daddy gets home! You'll get a good spanking from him!"

Dr. Reymert, who is director of the Moonshen Laboratory for Child Research at Mooseheart, Ill., protests against this type of threat as being "extremely unfair to fathers," and adds:

"If this were simply a matter of seeing to it that father got his 'just desserts,' it wouldn't be important."

"It is tragically important, however, because it reflects the lack of understanding in too many American families today of the responsibilities of the father as a companion, friend, and counselor to his children."

"Resigned to the role of family breadwinner and disciplinarian, how can the average American father ever hope to achieve a warm and close relationship with his children?"

pletion of the towing hookup by just two men was "one of the miracles of modern towing and salvage history."

One of the men is Captain Carlsen who ordered crewmen and passengers off the storm-beaten ship last Saturday and maintained a heroic, lonely vigil until Friday. Then he was joined by the second man, Kenneth Roger Dancy, a Scot crewman of the Turmoil, who leaped to the slippery, sloping deck of the Flying Enterprise.

But the spokesman said the "toughest part is still to come" before the hoped-for happy climax to one of the most stirring sea stories in maritime history can be written.

THE 70-DEGREE list of the Enterprise which puts its port rail awash, and its lack of power, complicate the towing job which, even if all goes well, will not be completed until Tuesday at the earliest. A light messenger line was put aboard the Flying Enterprise and later the heavy towing hawser was lashed to a post built into the slippery deck of the freighter.

Captain Dan Parker of the tug then radioed that he plans to maintain a speed of only four to five knots, "sort of feeling our way through the water." He added: "The weather looks good. I hope it stays on our side."

The captain said Carlsen and Dancy worked "until I thought they would drop."

The U. S. Destroyer Willard Keith, which arrived on the scene to relieve the USS Weeks shortly before the tug and freighter made connections, messaged:

"Captain Carlsen is jubilant and desires to remain aboard in case the tow parts."

The Keith also reported the arrival of the French seagoing tug Abeille-25, after a dash from Brest, France. The French tug joined the convoy as further protection.

Veteran salvage men had thought that it would require eight to ten men to complete the towing hookup and, accordingly, additional crew members of the Turmoil had prepared to follow Dancy's acrobatic feat when the final connection made such a step unnecessary.

The crew of the Turmoil, almost sleepless for ten days as they hauled one ship after another to safety in one of the North Atlantic's worst storms in decades, had watched Dancy's leap.

He perched on the edge of the tug until the stern of the Flying Enterprise was lifted high by a wave. Dancy then leaped like the daring man on the flying trapeze over the water and huddled the taffrail. He slipped and slid across the west deck, climbing almost like a fly over the 70 degree incline.

Gambling Take: Million-a-Month

COLUMBUS, Jan. 5.—(P)—Ohio gamblers, who bought $50 federal government wagering tax stamps, have admitted doing at least $1,206,340 worth of business in November.

The federal tax on gambling—10 per cent—was paid on this revenue, a check of Internal Revenue Bureau records in four cities showed. Here's the breakdown:

Cleveland (22 Northeastern Ohio counties) $630,000; Cincinnati, (15 southwestern counties) $385,570; Columbus (26 central counties) $163,852; Toledo (25 northwestern counties) $26,918.

New Navy Bomber Passes Its Tests

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 5.—(P)—Test Pilot Robert Baker Saturday described as "very satisfactory" the first flight of the North American XA2J-1 Savage, heaviest of the Navy's carrier based bombers.

With Baker and another company pilot, Charles Poage, at the controls, the twin engine, turbo-prop bomber was in the air for 32 minutes Friday.

"NO OFFICIALS of any stature are causing me any concern," Internal Revenue Commissioner John B. Dunlap tells reporters in Washington following President Truman's announcement of reorganization of the tax collection system. But he added, "That doesn't mean that something might not pop up tomorrow." The President purposes to abolish 64 collectors and establish 20 or 25 district commissioners, with all but the top commissioner under civil service.

IT'S 'OPERATION HOMECOMING'

3,198 Yank POWs Due Home In Giant Airlift

TOKYO, Jan. 5.—(P)—A giant airlift is being organized to speed home the 3,198 American prisoners of war held by the Communists in North Korean POW camps, if and when they are released.

It is unofficially dubbed "Operation Homecoming."

The men will be given medical examinations then flown immediately to Japan for care and rest. A man in good health on his release will be booked quickly for flight home and within about five days should be on his way.

"Every effort will be made for the medical care and physical welfare for our men," said Col. George Patrick Welch, official spokesman for General Ridgway's headquarters. "Their speediest possible movement back home has been arranged for and will be carried out."

General headquarters plans to call on the Air Force for transport for the operation.

The number of planes involved and some details of the airlift cannot be disclosed at this time.

THE PLANES will fly at least two routes from Japan to the United States, but the number to be sent over each probably won't be decided until the airlift is about to go into operation. One route is over the Central Pacific to San Francisco via Honolulu. The other is the northern route to Seattle via Alaska.

The British command in the Far East, part of Ridgway's command, also has drawn plans to evacuate all or most of the 919 British prisoners of war.

Aerial Duels Bring Break In Korea War

SEOUL, Jan. 5.—(P)—American Sabrejets and Communist MIGs tangled in a 20-minute aerial duel over Northwest Korea Saturday, but neither side inflicted any damage.

The clash between 21 Allied F-86s and 40 MIG-15s was the first aerial combat since Thursday. Sabrejets were grounded Friday by snow.

Another Sabrejet flight sighted 25 MIGs between Sinanju and Sinuiju, but neither side made a firing pass.

Overnight fighter-bombers claimed destruction or damage to 80 enemy vehicles in attacks on an estimated 1,200 vehicles moving under cover of darkness.

United Nations forces on the western front, an Eighth Army communique said, launched a counterattack west of Korangpo early Saturday "to complete re-establishment of advanced positions" lost to Reds Dec. 28.

The forces reported limited advances in attacks at three points against enemy groups whose combined strength was estimated at greater than two companies. The rest of the western front was quiet.

An Eighth Army staff officer estimated enemy casualties for the last seven days at 1,082. Allied losses, he added, were "unbelievably light."

Each Side Calls Other 'Bandits'

Very Real War Goes On As Conferences Make No Progress

MUNSAN, Jan. 5.—(P)—Frayed tempers snapped Saturday as truce negotiators haggled over how to police a Korean armistice. From both sides of the conference table came angry charges and blunt warnings. There was no progress toward a truce.

A UN delegate warned that the Allies will not be forced to bow to Communist armistice demands by the threat of growing Red air power.

"You have cast yourself in the role of a bandit xxx," said Maj. Gen. Howard M. Turner.

"You have fully exposed your ugly, ferocious features of a bandit xxx," retorted Chinese Maj. Gen. Hsieh Fang.

Using some of the strongest language since the armistice talks began, Turner told the Reds "the United Nations Command did not come to Korea to surrender," and "we have no intention of leaving the South Koreans to your tender mercies."

MATCHING Turner word for word, Hsieh replied "you represent yourselves as angels of peace and continue to interfere in internal affairs. Your statement is rude and absurd. You have gone too far in your absurdity and arrogance."

In a nearby conference tent, United Nations and Communist negotiators haggled fruitlessly for more than three hours over how prisoners of war should be exchanged.

"Their arguments are getting pretty feeble," said Rear Adm. R. E. Libby. "It is obvious they are killing time waiting for instructions."

Libby said the Reds refused to answer another request for an immediate exchange of sick and wounded prisoners.

Subcommittees working on the problems of supervising an armistice and exchanging prisoners were deadlocked when they adjourned, but both scheduled meetings for 11 a. m. Sunday (9 p. m. EST Saturday) in Panmunjom.

Saturday's session of the truce supervision subcommittee was a brief, but bitter, Turner lambasted the Reds in replying to a statement made Friday by Chinese Maj. Gen. Hsieh Fang.

"You suggested that if the UN commander was so concerned for the security of his forces he should withdraw from Korea," Turner said. "What a typical piece of upside-down reasoning!" he declared.

"We have no intention of walking away under a threat of your development of air power during the armistice and leaving the South Koreans to your tender mercies."

Romeo, Juliet In Tiff Over Where To Live

ATHENS, Greece, Jan. 5.—(P)—Crete's cave-man Romeo and the Juliet he carried off to the hills and married are living angrily apart because they disagreed about where they should live together.

According to reports of police and relatives, which kept extra editions rolling off Athens newspaper presses Friday night, Tassoula Petracogeorgi, the 20-year-old bride, insisted on living in Athens.

Fiery Costa Kephalyannis, her husband, tried to persuade her to stay at Heraclion, on the island of Crete, because of his business interests there.

Tassoula went home to her father.

The lovers' families both are powerful and long have held low opinions of each other. Feuding nearly broke out over the romance.

The police commander in Heraclion said he was taking precautions against a revival of the age-old family political feud.

'CLAP-TRAP' TALK BLASTED

Ag Agency Continuing Farm Bureau Battle

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—(INS)—The Agriculture Department is renewing its battle with the American Farm Bureau over the controversial family farm policy review program by carrying its cause to farmers themselves.

Under Secretary of Agriculture Clarence J. McCormick is delivering a series of talks to production and marketing groups at various points around the country. He spoke in St. Louis and New Orleans this week.

In these talks, McCormick is mining no words about opposition to the family farm program, which so far has been concentrated in the Farm Bureau. The theme of all the talks appears to be unity among farmers, their organizations and the government in achieving record 1952 production goals.

Coupling the farm review program with other farm programs, McCormick warned that they have to buck the bitter opposition of what he called unthinking or misinformed obstructionists who have opposed every "forward-looking policy and program."

HE SAID this "boring in" will not diminish in the near future and added that all indications point to an all-out attack on farm programs this year.

McCormick said farmers should be on the alert to protect and preserve the Democratic system of administering their own programs, alleging there are those who would take it away.

He said there are folks who are forever talking clap-trap about centralized Washington authority and regimentation of farmers.

He said this did not square with the facts because the goal in administration of national farm programs is to put more responsibility into the hands of farmers themselves.

The Farm Bureau has been highly critical of the family farm program on the grounds that it is politically-inspired, unnecessary and incomplete. The Farm Bureau claims that farmers have their own organizations to handle the goal of the program, which is to find out what the principal farm problems are and what can be done about them.

An Agriculture Department committee is analyzing the reports of meetings held all over the country for presentation to a group — excluding the Farm Bureau — which refuses to attend—that helped set up the program.

Meanwhile, McCormick is urging County PMA committees to go ahead on their own and take corrective measures wherever existing regulations and laws allow.

Second Youth Handed Over In Auto Theft Case

A second 18-year-old youth, being held here in connection with the theft of an auto, was handed over to Federal authorities Friday afternoon.

Glenn A. Haddox, of Circleville Route 2, was taken to Columbus at 6:20 p. m. Friday by Deputy U.S. Marshal Ralph F. Quette on a Federal warrant accusing him of transporting an auto across a state line.

On Friday another youth, William Fugate, 18, of 129 Pleasant street was turned over to Federal authorities to face a similar accusation.

The two lads are involved in the theft of an automobile owned by Edgar M. Greeno of 620 Clinton street, which was stolen last Saturday night in South Bloomingville, where Greeno was attending a dance.

THE AUTO was driven to Huntington, W. Va., where it was recovered Monday. The car was returned to Circleville by local police. The two youths fled the car when Huntington police arrived after being called by a filling station attendant.

'CLAP-TRAP' TALK BLASTED

Ag Agency Continuing Farm Bureau Battle

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5—(INS)—The Agriculture Department is renewing its battle with the American Farm Bureau over the controversial family farm policy review program by carrying its cause to farmers themselves.

Under Secretary of Agriculture Clarence J. McCormick is delivering a series of talks to production and marketing groups at various points around the country. He spoke in St. Louis and New Orleans this week.

In these talks, McCormick is mining no words about opposition to the family farm program, which so far has been concentrated in the Farm Bureau. The theme of all the talks appears to be unity among farmers, their organizations and the government in achieving record 1952 production goals.

Coupling the farm review program with other farm programs, McCormick warned that they have to buck the bitter opposition of what he called unthinking or misinformed obstructionists who have opposed every "forward-looking policy and program."

HE SAID this "boring in" will diminish in the near future and added that all indications point to an all-out attack on farm programs this year.

McCormick said farmers should be on the alert to protect and preserve the Democratic system of administering their own programs, alleging there are those who would take it away.

He said there are folks who are forever talking clap-trap about centralized Washington authority and regimentation of farmers.

He said this did not square with the facts because the goal in administration of national farm programs is to put more responsibility into the hands of farmers themselves.

The Farm Bureau has been highly critical of the family farm program on the grounds that it is politically-inspired, unnecessary and incomplete. The Farm Bureau claims that farmers have their own organizations to handle the goal of the program, which is to find out what the principal farm problems are and what can be done about them.

An Agriculture Department committee is analyzing the reports of meetings held all over the country for presentation to a group — excluding the Farm Bureau — which refuses to attend—that helped set up the program.

Meanwhile, McCormick is urging County PMA committees to go ahead on their own and take corrective measures wherever existing regulations and laws allow.

Second Youth Handed Over In Auto Theft Case

A second 18-year-old youth, being held here in connection with the theft of an auto, was handed over to Federal authorities Friday afternoon.

Glenn A. Haddox, of Circleville Route 2, was taken to Columbus at 6:20 p. m. Friday by Deputy U.S. Marshal Ralph F. Quelette on a Federal warrant accusing him of transporting an auto across a state line.

On Friday another youth, William Fugate, 18, of 129 Pleasant street was turned over to Federal authorities to face a similar accusation.

The two lads are involved in the theft of an automobile owned by Edgar M. Greeno of 620 Clinton street, which was stolen last Saturday night in South Bloomingville, where Greeno was attending a dance.

THE AUTO was driven to Huntington, W. Va., where it was recovered Monday. The car was returned to Circleville by local police. The two youths fled the car when Huntington police arrived after being called by a filling station attendant.

Household Hints

A thin coat of fresh, white shellac applied to cleaned brass should keep it from tarnishing. A second thin coat of shellac will give long life to the finish. The shellac always can be removed with denatured alcohol.

A polish containing silicone can be applied to a nylon clothesline to keep dirt and dust off, leaving a clean line for dainty lingerie.

Make Winter cole slaw look festive: add finely diced green pepper and pimiento to it. Or if you haven't any green pepper substitute finely minced parsley. Line a salad bowl with lettuce leaves, heap the slaw in the center, and then sprinkle the cabbage mixture with a little paprika for a professional touch.

'When We Pray' Is Sermon Theme For Lutherans

"When We Pray" is the sermon theme for worship service Sunday in Trinity Lutheran church. Text is taken from the teachings of Jesus in regard to prayer, as they are found in the Gospel of St. Matthew.

Student pastor Fred MacLean states: "The ability to go to God freely in prayer is one of the marks of strong Christian faith. Because of a faulty understanding of the nature of prayer, many people feel that it is ineffectual. They are often the people that expect immediate and positive answers. Also, we should realize the futility of trying to bargain with God. It is difficult for us to remember when we pray that we ought to pray for God's will to be done, rather than ours. God has given man a means of directly communicating with Him, only to have it used too seldom."

Senior Choir will lead the congregation in singing the hymns "What A Friend We Have In Jesus," "When Cold Our Hearts And Far From Thee" and "Love Divine, All Loves Excelling."

Services will be held in Christ church, Lick Run, at 7:30 p. m. Sunday.

Household Hints

A thin coat of fresh, white shellac applied to cleaned brass should keep it from tarnishing. A second thin coat of shellac will give long life to the finish. The shellac always can be removed with denatured alcohol.

A polish containing silicone can be applied to a nylon clothesline to keep dirt and dust off, leaving a clean line for dainty lingerie.

Make Winter cole slaw look festive: add finely diced green pepper and pimiento to it. Or if you haven't any green pepper substitute finely minced parsley. Line a salad bowl with lettuce leaves, heap the slaw in the center, and then sprinkle the cabbage mixture with a little paprika for a professional touch.

'When We Pray' Is Sermon Theme For Lutherans

"When We Pray" is the sermon theme for worship service Sunday in Trinity Lutheran church. Text is taken from the teachings of Jesus in regard to prayer, as they are found in the Gospel of St. Matthew.

Student pastor Fred MacLean states: "The ability to go to God freely in prayer is one of the marks of strong Christian faith. Because of a faulty understanding of the nature of prayer, many people feel that it is ineffectual. They are often the people that expect immediate and positive answers. Also, we should realize the futility of trying to bargain with God. It is difficult for us to remember when we pray that we ought to pray for God's will to be done, rather than ours. God has given man a means of direct communication with Him, only to have it used too seldom."

Senior choir will lead the congregation in singing the hymns "What A Friend We Have In Jesus," "When Cold Our Hearts And Far From Thee" and "Love Divine, All Love Excelling."

Services will be held in Christ church, Lick Run, at 7:30 p. m. Sunday.

Finding the Christ

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Scripture—John 1:19-51.

By Alfred J. Buescher

Priests from Jerusalem went to John the Baptist to inquire who he was. John answered them that he was "the voice of one crying in the wilderness. Make straight the way of the Lord."

Next day John saw Jesus coming toward him, and said to his companions, "Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world. This is He whom I said cometh after me."

Hearing John say that Jesus was the Lamb of God, two of his disciples followed Christ, and when He asked them why, they inquired where He lived. Jesus said, "Come and see," and they did.

George E. Sokolsky's These Days

Among Britishers, none appeals to the American imagination as does Winston Churchill. As British as John Bull, he has an instinct for American atmosphere and personality.

He comes to repair the damage done to Anglo-American relations by the British Socialists, the pro-British excesses of Dean Acheson and those Americans who are captives of British culture. In a word, he must recognize, as few of his countrymen do, that Americans who are more British than American are as offensive to most Americans as those who are more pro-Russian than they are pro-American. The American people are turning from a synthetic globalism, which has brought nothing but misery and death, to patriotism, which built our country.

Churchill is neither a Socialist nor a Globalist. He is a British Imperialist who did not take office to preside over the dissolution of the British Empire. He represents in his person not only a country, but a civilization.

Yet, it is impossible for him not to recognize three major historic factors which may, in the broadest sense, be producing the forces that will reduce Great Britain to a secondary role. These are:

1. The rise of new civilizations, out of war and revolution, which contest Anglo-Saxon supremacy and superiority not only from the economic and political standpoint but also on a racial basis;
2. The reduction of the authority in world affairs of the processing nations, with the attendant wealth that comes from banking, shipping and insurance. The automatic machine reduces the advantages of human skills and even the so-called "know-how" of experience. This new industrial revolution is already having far-reaching effects upon the great colonial powers.
3. The rise of new empires—the Soviet Empire; the Moslem Cultural Empire; the Latins, perhaps under Spanish or Argentinian leadership; the emergence of Soviet China as a military power; the expansion of the Soviet periphery toward the Indian countries—these historic factors can only be ignored by a political ostrich—a description that can never fit Winston Churchill. Among these new empires, military operations are not conventional, involving the Anglo-American countries in major difficulties.

The British, as the Americans, are being forced to recognize that inaccurately described racial problems move upon the current canvas with greater vigor than either economic or political problems. A Pakistani will not, for instance, accept the Anglo-Saxon concept of "White Superiority," which has no foundation in science or history.

This is tough business and difficult to discuss in the United States where the Negro problem arouses deep emotions. Yet, we are piling up casualties in Korea over previously this problem. I can say from my own long experience in Asia that if we spent billions upon billions on that continent to make ourselves popular and to engage the good-will of those peoples, we shall fail as long as those peoples believe that we believe that we are superior because of race.

True, Soviet Russia is doing a masterly job stimulating racial antagonism. They will profit greatly out of the stupidities of the Florida bombings. But long before Soviet Russian propaganda appeared on the scene, what in Asia is called "Anti-colonialism," which is racial, not nationalistic, was a force. I first encountered it in China as early as 1918 and in Japan in 1920. The Japanese Black Dragon society, headed by Mitsuru Toyama, was already a force.

ANTI-INFLATION BULWARK

VICIOUS, uncontrollable inflation — the bogey against which those advocating taxes higher than those now in effect to prevent the people from engaging in a "spending orgy"—has failed to materialize. The general level of all commodity prices is only 1.4 higher than a year ago. Biggest increases have been in wages and taxes.

It seemed for a brief period as if those who predicted wild inflation had basis for their pessimism. Prices rose rapidly to a peak last March. Then they started tapering off. Currently they are four per cent below the March average. At the moment the price index is stationary.

Those who periodically see inflation about to devour the nation underestimate the ability of America to produce goods and services. Another factor is that the rearmament program has not diverted as great a percentage of capacity to non-civilian goods as was planned.

It is widely predicted now that 1952 will be the crucial year. Weapon builders are expected to really get down to business this year. More productive capacity will be diverted from consumer goods. If consumer supplies fall below demand the abundant supply of money may be used to bid up prices. But the comparatively cautious tempo of consumer buying in this first month of the new year gives no indication of such a trend.

Production is the antidote to inflation. As long as production continues to gain, the bogey of uncontrollable inflation will continue to be only a specter.

NO SURE-ALL

LONG after most cities, New York is facing up to the seriousness of its parking problem. Its current effort is vigorous, but it seems to be suffering from too many cooks.

There is much pressure for restricting parking, including legislation introduced in the city council which would prohibit parking on one side of every street 40 feet or less in width. The acting traffic commissioner, somewhat cool to this proposal, comes up with a recommendation for the installation of 13,000 more parking meters.

An experiment with 1,500 meters during a 90-day period has, the commissioner says, shown that they reduce double parking, ease congestion and produce a 200 per cent profit.

Parking meters do not reduce congestion. Only one thing can do that—off-street parking facilities. But all important cities are deficient in off-street parking accommodations. But city officials have awakened to the fact that survival of metropolitan centers depends on their ability to solve their traffic problem, the heart of which is parking.

Some of the presidential trial balloons are already giving every indication of over-inflation.

Night Of Loneliness A Year Ago

NEW YORK—It is a thing of terror and strange beauty to see a great city abandoned in wartime.

It was that way a year ago this week in Seoul, when the Allies yielded the Korean capital to padded Chinese soldiers who came across the hills like waves of walking quilts.

The fear of their coming spread invisibly before them. Hundreds of thousands of Seoul civilians had been leaving for days, marching south in straggling columns of death and hunger.

But the military decision to evacuate came suddenly. One morning the correspondents watched a British battalion make a calm and studied counter-attack against the enemy 18 miles north of the city. But when we returned late that afternoon the press camp was breaking up and the order went out:

"Pack and leave immediately. The army is pulling out tonight."

Several correspondents, including Dwight Martin of Time magazine and myself, decided to remain overnight and watch the withdrawal.

It gave us an eerie feeling as we stood at the entrance of the empty Hotel Chosun, one of the largest hostilities in Korea, and watched flames licking at the newspaper plant across the street.

Fires began to break out all over the city and a smoke pall quickened the twilight. Night fell. The pavements echoed with the roar of tanks and guns being wheeled out of the city. It seemed impossible that mere masses of enemy riflemen on foot could force all that vast weight of metal armor backward—but they were.

The fires mushroomed into acres of singing flame. Outlined against them were the pitiful lines of refugees. Many too weak to continue collapsed and lay unheeded.

We bucked the endless traffic back up to the front. It wasn't so far now. A colonel said:

"We're pulling out ourselves in half an hour. You'd better leave."

The hills and paddies held a dark menace. Everything was lonely and unreal, and the unfought fires threw frightening shadows. An orphan boy wailed, all alone and forgotten, on the city hall steps. We picked him up and drove back to the hotel and rifled some blankets to keep him warm.

At the last command post in the city some soldiers were eating a Christmas fruitcake that had just arrived. They shared it with us.

"It's a funny thing," said a young captain, "but I courted my wife in this very room. I was stationed here before the war, and my wife worked for an American civilian agency that quartered its women employees in this building."

"I used to meet her here to go out on dates. It seems odd to be back here. I wonder what she's thinking right now."

And ever since then I've wondered whether the captain ever got to tell her about his last night in Seoul.

We bedded down until morning. We toured Seoul for the last time. The rattle of small arms could be heard on the outskirts.

By noon the last Allied unit had trundled out of the smoking city and across the two bridges spanning the Han river. About 2 p. m. U. S. Army Engineers blew the final bridge, and one said: "Well, that's the last we'll ever see of Seoul."

That was the general feeling among the Allied army then. Many officers and men then thought we would have to give up Korea entirely and withdraw to Japan. And there was bitterness in their going, for while they had known little joy in that weary peninsula they had no wish to be pushed from it.

But they formed a new line and held it. Today we hold Seoul again.

And if a real peace there still seems far away, well—the situation isn't much better than it was on that night of loneliness a year ago.

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

SAM MAPES walked slowly up the long gravelled path to the front door of the house. His movements were deliberate rather than uncertain, though there was uncertainty in his mind. Maybe he ought not to go to the front door. Maybe he ought to go around to the back, after all. It was hard to tell. When you were a Captain in the Army you didn't feel like you had to come into a place the kitchen way even if your mother did work there. When you were a Captain in the Army and had a car all your own—a new one that you'd bought yourself and driven all the way from California—you felt different. You felt proud and good as anybody. Same as your car was as good as any of those others parked there in front of the church.

His step slowed still more while his eyes, bright and alive in the moon roundness of his brown face, darted from window to window of the house before him. This was it, all right. Miss Moore had described it over the telephone right good. Couldn't miss it. But he wished she was watching for him and would come out and meet him. That'd settle things quick. He'd go where she took him.

Supposing he did keep on and ring the front doorbell and Ma come—came to answer it? Maybe she'd call him "Biggity," or maybe she wouldn't. Maybe he'd be the way she was when he had come home a Lieutenant. Not knowing what to say or do. Just looking at him and shaking her head and not trying to tell him anything at all. The point was, though, that then he'd seen her only in the flat in Harlem where she had a room. He hadn't gone to the Moores' apartment that time. Just telephoned 'em. Didn't know why. Bashful, maybe. Not used to his uniform and rank. Kind of between nay and grass.

Sam glanced impatiently at his gleaming gold wrist-watch, shook his head negatively, and went back down the gravel path toward his car.

A woman's voice hailed him. "Sam! Sam Mapes! Is that you?" It was Virginia. She had heard the automobile stop down in front, and, knowing it was too late an arrival for any churchgoers, she had suspected it might be he. She hurried around the corner of the house to greet him.

"You look fine, Sam. Simply fine!" She stood a moment, holding his hand in both of hers, her eyes going over him and giving him the warm friendly admiration his soul craved. "But you're about fifty pounds heavier than when I last saw you. Was it five years ago? Heavens! You're huge!"

He grinned, his voice rolling up, rich and mellow. "Yes, ma'am. I know. I got to watch my weight all the time."

She nodded and released him, touching the two shining bars on his shoulder as she did so. "We're proud of these. All of us. Very proud. Now come around under the trees and I'll call Mary."

She smiled at him. "This is the happiest day of her life, you know, Sam."

"I'm glad of that, ma'am."

It was all easy going now. She was treating him like a Captain. She was a good woman. And he wouldn't shame her, sitting out under the trees with her and Mister Moore. He knew how to behave. He'd learned. You just watch it all the time. You remember, too, you've pulled yourself up to be a Captain in the Army. You take it easy, but you watch it.

With a panther lightness for all his bulk, he followed a little behind her, confident but alert, pleased but modest, until they came to the chairs under the wisteria vine.

It had become customary for the Atwoods almost always to stop at the Moores on their way home from church if they saw anyone out under the trees. Usually there was a small crowd. For on Sunday the writers and artists and those people of the dramatic world whom Virginia and Philip knew found their way out to "the country" for a long afternoon and longer evening.

Virginia, skilled at informal entertainment, made no work of this. Her guests helped themselves to food and to drinks and, when these were gone, they cheerfully drove their cars downtown to the delicatessen or to some Italian shop they found open and came back with their arms loaded. Then someone would take over the kitchen, and provender would appear again. Invariably around noon Virginia kept a watch out for Barth and Constance and summoned them over to meet her.

New Drugs Are Helpful In Some Disorders Of The Skin

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

TWO newly discovered drugs, ACTH and cortisone, are offering relief to sufferers from many skin diseases.

Diseases of the skin include some of the commonest and most annoying disorders, such as acne, which eventually disappear. At the other extreme, they include some of the deadliest of all diseases. Skin diseases also cause more or less serious social problems for the patient, since some of the lesions are on surfaces where they can be seen.

Some Beneficial Results

I am sure, therefore, that many readers will welcome the news concerning effects of the new drugs. In recent tests, ACTH and cortisone were used in treating 19 different skin disorders. Some conditions that are most difficult to control showed beneficial results. For example, five cases of lupus erythematosus, an incurable disease, were treated in this way with good results.

Some patients in this group suffered from pemphigus, a disease which causes large hemorrhage-filled blisters, and is also incurable. A few of these patients showed remarkable improvement.

Drug Sensitivity

Exfoliative dermatitis is a condition in which the skin of various parts of the body peels off in scales. It occurs when the skin is oversensitive to certain drugs. Many such cases have been cured with ACTH and cortisone.

Certain types of severe psoriasis and Hodgkin's disease of the skin were also helped.

Persons who are allergic to various materials sometimes are afflicted with blisters, pimples, or inflammation of the skin. These skin reactions can often be controlled with various types of injections. Certain severe allergic reactions of the skin, which do not respond to the usual treatment, have done well when treated with ACTH and cortisone.

Not Permanent Cures

It must be emphasized that these drugs cannot be considered permanent cures for the types of skin disease I have mentioned. Treatment must be continued over a long period; most patients have a relapse after the treatment is stopped. However, the drugs do offer new hope of relieving the distressing symptoms for a considerable length of time.

It is also important to note that the drugs may rarely produce various complications in certain patients, such as swelling of the ankles, darkening of the skin and some confusion in thinking. For this reason, ACTH and cortisone must always be given under the supervision of a physician, who will watch for any undesirable effects and alter the treatment accordingly.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

L. M. T.: I have occasional feelings of pressure in my throat and a frequent urge to vomit. Sometimes, when I do vomit, I notice that food I have eaten several days ago is present. What could be causing this?

Answer: The symptoms you describe might be caused by a diverticulum of the esophagus. The esophagus is the tube between the throat and the stomach. In this condition there is a pouch present in the normally straight tube. The pouch holds back much of the food and keeps it from getting into the stomach. This disorder can be corrected by surgery.

ANTI-INFLATION BULWARK

VICIOUS, uncontrollable inflation — the bogey against which those advocating taxes higher than those now in effect to prevent the people from engaging in a "spending orgy"—has failed to materialize. The general level of all commodity prices is only 1.4 higher than a year ago. Biggest increases have been in wages and taxes.

It seemed for a brief period as if those who predicted wild inflation had basis for their pessimism. Prices rose rapidly to a peak last March. Then they started tapering off. Currently they are four per cent below the March average. At the moment the price index is stationary.

Those who periodically see inflation about to devour the nation underestimate the ability of America to produce goods and services. Another factor is that the rearmament program has not diverted as great a percentage of capacity to non-civilian goods as was planned.

It is widely predicted now that 1952 will be the crucial year. Weapon builders are expected to really get down to business this year. More productive capacity will be diverted from consumer goods. If consumer supplies fall below demand the abundant tempo of consumer buying in this first month of the new year gives no indication of such a trend.

Production is the antidote to inflation. As long as production continues to gain, the bogey of uncontrollable inflation will continue to be only a specter.

NO SURE-ALL

LONG after most cities, New York is facing up to the seriousness of its parking problem. Its current effort is vigorous, but it seems to be suffering from too many cooks.

There is much pressure for restricting parking, including legislation introduced in the city council which would prohibit parking on one side of every street 40 feet or less in width. The acting traffic commissioner, somewhat cool to this proposal, comes up with a recommendation for the installation of 13,000 more parking meters.

An experiment with 1,500 meters during a 90-day period has, the commissioner says, shown that they reduce double parking, ease congestion and produce a 200 per cent profit.

Parking meters do not reduce congestion. Only one thing can do that—off-street parking facilities. But all important cities are deficient in off-street parking accommodations. But city officials have awakened to the fact that survival of metropolitan centers depends on their ability to solve their traffic problem, the heart of which is parking.

Some of the presidential trial balloons are already giving every indication of over-inflation.

These Days

Among Britishers, none appeals to the American imagination as does Winston Churchill. As British as John Bull, he has an instinct for American atmosphere and personality.

He comes to repair the damage done to Anglo-American relations by the British Socialists, the pro-British excesses of Dean Acheson and those Americans who are captives of British culture. In a word, he must recognize, as few of his countrymen do, that Americans who are more British than American are as offensive to most Americans as those who are more pro-Russian than they are pro-American. The American people are turning from a synthetic globalism, which has brought nothing but misery and death, to patriotism, which built our country.

Churchill is neither a Socialist nor a Globalist. He is a British Imperialist who did not take office to preside over the dissolution of the British Empire. He represents in his person not only a country, but a civilization.

Yet, it is impossible for him not to recognize three major historic factors which may, in the broadest sense, be producing the forces that will reduce Great Britain to a secondary role. These are:

1. The rise of new civilizations, out of war and revolution, which contest Anglo-Saxon supremacy and superiority not only from the economic and political standpoint but also on a racial basis;

2. The reduction of the authority in world affairs of the processing nations, with the attendant wealth that comes from banking, shipping and insurance. The automatic machine reduces the advantages of human skills and even the so-called "know-how" of experience. This new industrial revolution is already having far-reaching effects upon the great colonial powers.

3. The rise of new empires—the Soviet Empire; the Moslem Cultural Empire; the Latins, perhaps under Spanish or Argentinian leadership; the emergence of Soviet China as a military power; the expansion of the Soviet periphery toward the Indian countries—these historic factors can only be ignored by a political ostrich—a description that can never fit Winston Churchill. Among these new empires, military operations are not conventional, involving the Anglo-American countries in major difficulties.

The British, as the Americans, are being forced to recognize that inaccurately described racial problems move upon the current canvas with greater vigor than either economic or political problems. A Pakistani will not, for instance, accept the Anglo-Saxon concept of "White Superiority," which has no foundation in science or history.

This is tough business and difficult to discuss in the United States where the Negro problem arouses deep emotions. Yet, we are piling up casualties in Korea over precisely this problem. I can say from my own long experience in Asia that if we spent billions upon billions on that continent to make ourselves popular and to engage the good-will of those peoples, we shall fail as long as those peoples believe that we believe that we are superior because of race.

True, Soviet Russia is doing a masterly job stimulating racial antagonism. The y will profit greatly out of the stupidities of the Florida bombings. But long before Soviet Russian propaganda appeared on the scene, what in Asia is called "Anti-colonialism," which is racial, not nationalistic, was a force. I first encountered it in China as early as 1918 and in Japan in 1920. The Japanese Black Dragon society, headed by Mitsuru Toyama, was already a force.

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

SAM MAPES walked slowly up the long gravelled path to the front door of the house. His movements were deliberate rather than uncertain, though there was uncertainty in his mind. Maybe he ought not to go to the front door. Maybe he ought to go around to the back, after all. It was hard to tell. When you were a Captain in the Army you didn't feel like you had to come into a place like the kitchen way even if your mother did work there. When you were a Captain in the Army and had a car all your own—a new one that you'd bought yourself and driven all the way from California—you felt different. You felt proud and good as anybody. Same as your car was as good as any of those others parked there in front of the church.

His step slowed still more while his eyes, bright and alive in the moon roundness of his brown face, darted from window to window of the house before him. This was it, all right. Miz Moore had described it over the telephone right good. Couldn't miss it. But he wished she was watching for him and would come out and meet him. That'd settle things quick. He'd go where she took him.

Supposing he did keep on and ring the front doorbell and Ma come—came to answer it? Maybe she'd call him "Biggity," or maybe she wouldn't. Maybe she'd be the way she was when he had come home a Lieutenant. Not knowing what to say or do. Just looking at him and shaking her head and not trying to tell him anything at all. The point was, though, that then he'd seen her only in the flat in Harlem where she had a room. He hadn't gone to the Moores' apartment that time. Just telephoned. Didn't know why. Bashful, maybe. Not used to his uniform and rank. Kind of between hay and grass.

Sam glanced impatiently at his gleaming gold wrist-watch, shook his head negatively, and went back down the gravel path toward his car.

A woman's voice hailed him. "Sam! Sam Mapes! Is that you?" It was Virginia. She had heard the automobile stop down in front, and, knowing it was too late an arrival for any churchgoers, she had suspected it might be he. She hurried around the corner of the house to greet him.

"You look fine, Sam. Simply fine!" She stood a moment, holding his hand in both of hers, her eyes going over him and giving him the warm friendly admiration his soul craved. "But you're about fifty pounds heavier than when I last saw you. Was it five years ago? Heavens! You're huge!"

He grinned, his voice rolling up, rich and mellow. "Yes, ma'am. I know. I got to watch my weight all the time."

She nodded and released him, touching the two shining bars on his shoulder as she did so. "We're proud of these. All of us. Very proud. Now come around under the trees and I'll call Mary. She smiled at him. "This is the happiest day of her life, you know, Sam."

"I'm glad of that, ma'am." It was all easy going now. She was treating him like a Captain. She was a good woman. And he wouldn't shame her, sitting out under the trees with her and Mister Moore. He knew how to behave. He'd learned. You just watch it all the time. You remember you're black. But you remember, too, you've pulled yourself up to be a Captain in the Army. You take it easy, but you watch it.

With a panther lightness for all his bulk, he followed a little behind her, confident but alert, pleased but modest, until they came to the chairs under the wistaria vine.

It had become customary for the Atwoods almost always to stop at the Moores on their way home from church if they saw anyone out under the trees. Usually there was a small crowd. For on Sunday the writers and artists and those people of the dramatic world whom Virginia and Philip knew found their way out to "the country" for a long afternoon and longer evening.

Virginia, skilled at informal entertainment, made no work of this. Her guests helped themselves to food and to drinks and, when these were gone, they cheerfully drove their cars downtown to the delicatessen or to some Italian shop they found open and came back with their arms loaded. Then someone would take over the kitchen, and provender would appear again. Invariably around noon Virginia kept a watch out for Barth and Constance and summoned them over to meet her.

friends with a peremptoriness that, because of its underlying affection, they could not refuse.

"Come meet these people before the crowd gets too thick and too noisy," she would say. "Or, rather, let them meet you." And then she would call out ringingly, "Everybody! Gather round! Here is my friend, the Parson! That was the way she always introduced him."

But today only one stranger seemed to be up there under the wistaria vine, and as Virginia called and waved a beckoning arm, Barth, who was farsighted, said, "It's Sam. Mary's Sam. We must go meet him."

A little later, talking over that hour alone on the veranda, Constance said, "Virginia is really a rare woman, Barth."

"Yes." "The way she managed to make it seem so casual and right that we should all be sitting there together, eating and drinking, I mean."

"Yes." "Mary didn't quite like it, though. Did you notice how she pulled her chair a little apart? And she sat on the edge of it the whole time. She felt out of place and uncomfortable."

"She was grateful, though." "I know. Pathetically grateful. It came out, didn't it, when Virginia asked her if she would forgive them for keeping Sam out there with them? 'We do so want to hear all that's happened to him,' she explained. And Mary answered, 'Yes, ma'am.' Then she gave that little rueful laugh—remember?"

He nodded. "Virginia realized that, Barth. She sensed it. That's what makes her so rare. She was the bridge between Sam and his mother. Without her they would both have been hurt, and at the most wonderful moment for both of them."

"They're all rare," Barth said. "Virginia, of course. But Mary, too. And Sam. I asked him—I don't think you heard this. You were talking to Donald at the time—I asked him how he had happened to re-enlist in the Army. Seems he's a skilled mechanic. He can take apart and put together anything. Anything at all. He wanted to work in a garage, but felt the Army offered him better opportunity."

Night Of Loneliness A Year Ago

NEW YORK—It is a thing of terror and strange beauty to see a great city abandoned in wartime.

It was that way a year ago this week in Seoul, when the Allies yielded the Korean capital to padded Chinese soldiers who came across the hills like waves of walking quilts.

The fear of their coming spread invisibly before them. Hundreds of thousands of Seoul civilians had been leaving for days, marching south in straggling columns of death and hunger.

But the military decision to evacuate came suddenly. One morning the correspondents watched a British battalion make a calm and studied counterattack against the enemy 18 miles north of the city. But when they returned late that afternoon the press camp was breaking up and the order went out:

"Pack and leave immediately. The army is pulling out tonight."

Several correspondents, including ing Dwight Martin of Time Magazine and myself, decided to remain overnight and watch the withdrawal.

It gave us an eerie feeling as we stood at the entrance of the empty Hotel Chosun, one of the largest hostels in Korea, and watched flames licking at the newspaper plant across the street.

Fires began to break out all over the city and a smoke pall quickened the twilight. Night fell, the pavements echoed with the roar of tanks and guns being wheeled out of the city. It seemed impossible that mere masses of enemy riflemen on foot could force all that vast weight of metal armor backward—but they were.

The fires mushroomed into acres of singing flame. Outlined against them were the pitiful lines of refugees. Many too weak to continue collapsed and lay unheeded.

We bucked the endless traffic back up to the front. It wasn't so far now. A colonel said;

"We're pulling out ourself in half an hour. You'd better leave."

The hills and paddies held a dark menace. Everything was lonely and unreal, and the unfought fires threw frightening shadows. An orphan boy wailed, all alone and forgotten, on the city hall steps. We picked him up and drove back to the hotel and rifled some blankets to keep him warm.

At the last command post in the city some soldiers were eating a Christmas fruitcake that had just arrived. They shared it with us.

"It's a funny thing," said a young captain, "but I courted my wife in this very room. I was stationed here before the war, and my wife worked for an American civilian agency that quartered its women employees in this building."

"I used to meet her here to go out on dates. It seems odd to be back here. I wonder what she's thinking right now."

And ever since then I've wondered whether the captain ever got to tell her about his last night in Seoul.

We bedded down until morning. We toured Seoul for the last time. The rattle of small arms could be heard on the outskirts.

By noon the last Allied unit had trundled out of the smoking city and across the two bridges spanning the Han river. About 2 p. m. U. S. Army Engineers blew the final bridge, and one said:

"Well, that's the last we'll ever see of Seoul."

That was the general feeling among the Allied army then. Many officers and men then thought we would have to give up Korea entirely and withdraw to Japan. And there was bitterness in their going, for while they had known little joy in that weary peninsula they had no wish to be pushed from it.

But they formed a new line and held it. Today we hold Seoul again.

And if a real peace there still seems far away, well—the situation isn't much better than it was on that night of loneliness a year ago.

Teenagers Advised To Budget Time

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Feature Writer

Plan a time bank for '52. Make this the year when every minute counts and be surprised that you can accomplish so much. People moan that life is short, but usually these are not the people who use every second to advantage. They are time wasters and do-littles.

Here are some hints on how to make your seconds, minutes and hours count:

1. Make every school session count. If you waste time in school you are depriving yourself of knowledge, wasting the time and talents of your teacher, and the tuition dollars of your parents.

2. Laziness and relaxation are two different things. If you need relaxation take it easy when necessary. But don't slouch in a chair when there's work to be done and you feel fit. Lend a hand with dishwashing, dusting and other household jobs.

3. Attend Sabbath services as a habit, and not just whenever you feel like it. You will learn from this:

(a) Love of God and neighbor will keep you from thinking about yourself constantly — one reason people become neurotic.

(b) Attending on a stormy day or when it is not convenient. Sacrifice makes you feel good and sets you up to do any job under adverse circumstances.

(c) Church is a shelter. It is a place you can visit when all else seems to fail you, as people who become desperate often find.

(d) It will keep you appraised constantly of right and wrong so that you do not get in the habit of justifying some of your indiscretions.

4. Unless you really like the boy and an engagement is imminent, don't waste time by steady dating. Youth is the time to learn about character, and you'll learn by meeting different types of people. Stay in circulation as long as possible.

5. One little eye-catcher which could be placed on school book and the home mirror is "Do It Now." Procrastination will make you lethargic. Whenever a task is postponed two or three times it becomes more of a chore.

6. If you are a radio listener, do your manicure and pedicure while you listen to your favorite mystery drama or comedian. These and other little grooming tasks such as mending, darning and ironing can be accomplished while your radio keeps you amused.

7. That job for next summer will be easier to locate if you work on it now in your spare time. Write to firms near your house or in the town or village you'd like to work and inquire as to the possibilities of employment, requesting an application.

8. Idle hands can get into mischief. Learn to knit, crochet or sew. Take up a hobby — you might find you're interested enough to make it your life's work.

Child Problems and Solutions

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, PhD

It is hard enough for a pair of parents to guide a child of any age happily and win his cooperation and esteem, when they are in close accord most of the time. But when they strongly disagree over the requirements and privileges of the child, how much harder life becomes for all of them. And how very tragic it can be when the parental disagreement occurs over an adolescent son or daughter.

A lawyer, father of four children, 18, 13, 10 and 8, writes: "The eldest boy has been away from home two years one in college, where he does well. For several years he has worked on part-time jobs and driven a delivery wagon in summer."

"When he is home for visits or summer, my wife wants me to tell him how many times a week he may go out, where he may go and what time to return. I do not always see eye to eye with her on these matters. But she gets furious with me and with the boy if I do not enforce her ideas. I try to guide by consulting with the boy."

"Should I say to an eighteen-year-old son, 'You must stay home tonight, you must go with the family some place?' For instance, last Christmas my wife forbade him to leave the home to mingle with any of his young friends."

"His mother is always hounding him about the way he spends money. He is a little free, perhaps, but not a spendthrift. If you have some suggestions, please let me have them."

I wrote the father about as follows: As you imply, that lad is about grown up. For you to demand of him the program expected by his mother would seem to me unreasonable, though I have sympathy with her desire that he should not be away from home an excessive number of nights or exceedingly late, especially with the car.

But I have no doubt that if you and the mother could calmly talk these matters over first alone, and with him later, she would grow more reasonable with her standards and he more willing to try to approach them. Even you alone might be able to persuade him to come nearer to her wishes.

What is happening is that you and your son are pretty strongly lined up against the mother, causing her in turn to grow more severe, more antagonistic to you and the boy and he more antagonistic to her. She may suppose that you and the son have small secret understandings for outwitting her. Also implied in your letter is the indication that she is only on the sidelines and not a mutual participant as a parent.

Deeper and more far-reaching are the obvious lacks in mutual regard and companionship between you and your wife. It might be possible for you to build up more self-regard in her and make her feel more worthwhile as a person and member of the family. To this end you might cause all the children to help you.

Answering Parents' Questions
Q. My husband has been reading with our son of the ninth grade his text-book assignments and showing him how to turn each paragraph into a few words of his own. Doesn't this make the boy too dependent?

A. I don't see why. Indeed, I can think of no finer way for this father to help his son with his school work, provided the father is always calm and patient while doing so. See, moreover, the father-son companionship this affords.

Starlight Double Delight Cake Wins $25,000 Prize

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

You don't have to be a fancy cook to win a $25,000 recipe prize. But you do have to have an ingenious husband.

Mrs. Samuel P. Weston, who just walked off with first prize in Pillsbury Flour Company's third Grand National recipe and baking contest, didn't own a cookbook when she got married. Fortunately her husband brought his along. She's acquired only one other culinary guide—a cookbook put out by a church group in Vermont.

The Westons live in La Jolla, California. Helen Weston does all her own housework and looks after her two sons, aged 3 and 6. Her husband edits the monthly house organ for the Solar Aircraft Company and enters contests as a hobby. That's how Helen Weston happened to be one of the 100 finalists at the Bake-off at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York City.

The grand-prize winning recipe is a different kind of cake. First you make a chocolate peppermint frosting with a cream-cheese base, then you do something revolutionary—you throw half the frosting into the cake.

When I asked Mrs. Weston how she and her husband ever thought of this—for which there is no precedent in cookbooks—she said the dream it up one evening when they were in their kitchen. She had been to market that day and another shopper asked her whether she had tried a delicious cream-cheese and chocolate frosting. The Westons were trying the frosting when Sam decided they ought to do something unusual with it. "What goes into a chocolate cake?" he asked and took off from there.

There wasn't enough leavening in their first cake attempt and it was a little heavy. But after the fourth baking they had something they thought was pretty good.

Simple fare is what Helen Weston cooks for her family, and even when they entertain she never goes fancy. Cold meat, salad, cake and ice cream make up the menu she usually serves guests. She packs her husband's lunchbox every day and says his favorite sandwiches are made of chopped black olives, cold hamburger, or hard-cooked egg with lots of onions.

When it comes to birthdays Helen Weston says she "wouldn't think of buying a 'store' cake!"

Here is the prize recipe:
$25,000 STARLIGHT DOUBLE DELIGHT CAKE

Cream together 2 packages (3 oz. size) cream cheese, ½ cup shortening, ½ teaspoon vanilla and ½ teaspoon peppermint extract until fluffy. Measure 6 cups (1½ lbs.) sifted confectioners' sugar. Blend half of sugar into creamed cheese mixture. Add ¼ cup hot water alternately with balance of sugar. Blend in 4 squares (4 oz.) melted chocolate. Reserve half of mixture (2 cups) as frosting for baked cake.

Sift 2½ cups flour with 1½ teaspoons soda and 1 teaspoon salt. Combine ¼ cup shortening and remaining chocolate-frosting mixture; mix thoroughly. Blend in 3 eggs, one at a time. Beat for 1 minute. Measure ¾ cup milk; add alternately with sifted dry ingredients to creamed mixture, beginning and ending with dry ingredients.

"Do You Remember..?"

Do you remember the car you were driving back in 1940? Do you recall the summer suit you bought with the sleeves that always felt a little too short? Was that the year you moved into your new house, or was it the year you built the addition on the old one?

How's your memory on the prices you paid for things in those days? Take that 1940 car, for instance. Around a thousand dollars? Today that same make would run about $2,000 or 100% more. The suit? It probably cost you around $40. Today it would set you back from $65 to $85, for men's clothing prices have gone up approximately 100%. And that new house, or the addition to the old one, would take more than twice as many of your dollars as they did in 1940.

As a matter of fact, there are few things you buy today, from the Sunday roast to your daily newspaper, that haven't gone up in price from 50 to 300%.

One of the few things that lagged far behind the rise in others is the price of telephone service. In terms of convenience, usefulness, and quality, there are very few things you buy that give so much for so little.

For her wedding, the bride was wearing an aqua street length dress with black accessories and a corsage of red rose buds. Mrs. Pierce was attired in a coral knitted suit and a Winter white hat. Her corsage was of white carnations.

Following the ceremony, Mrs. Teal entertained with a wedding reception in her home where the linen covered bridal table was centered with the traditional three-tiered wedding cake, topped with a miniature bride and groom.

Tall white tapers in crystal holders flanked the cake which was surrounded with an arrangement of yellow snapdragons and greenery. Reception hostesses were Mrs. C. E. Davis of North Court street, Mrs. G. Guy Campbell of South Court street and Mrs. John Teal of West Ohio street, sister-in-law of the bride.

Guests at the wedding and reception were the bridegroom's mother, his grandmother, Mrs. Lillian Walters of Buckeye Lake; Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Walters and sons; Misses Barbara Harris, Rosemary Wehner and Grace Davis, all of Columbus; the Rev. and Mrs. Charles Gossett and daughter, Patsey Jo, of Columbus; Mr. and Mrs. Jack Owens and daughters of Chillicothe and Freeman Williams of Newark.

Teenagers Advised To Budget Time

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Feature Writer

Plan a time bank for '52. Make this the year when every minute counts and be surprised that you can accomplish so much. People moan that life is short, but usually these are not the people who use every second to advantage. They are time wasters and do-littles.

Here are some hints on how to make your seconds, minutes and hours count:

1. Make every school session count. If you waste time in school you are depriving yourself of knowledge, wasting the time and talents of your teacher, and the tuition dollars of your parents.

2. Laziness and relaxation are two different things. If you need relaxation take it easy when necessary. But don't slouch in a chair when there's work to be done and you feel fit. Lend a hand with dishwashing, dusting and other household jobs.

3. Attend Sabbath services as a habit, and not just whenever you feel like it. You will learn from this:

(a) Love of God and neighbor will keep you from thinking about yourself constantly — one reason people become neurotic.

(b) Attending on a stormy day or when it is not convenient. Sacrifice makes you feel good and sets you up to do any job under adverse circumstances.

(c) Church is a shelter. It is a place you can visit when all else seems to fail you, as people who become desperate often find.

(d) It will keep you apprised constantly of right and wrong so that you do not get in the habit of justifying some of your indiscretions.

4. Unless you really like the boy and an engagement is imminent, don't waste time by steady dating. Youth is the time to learn about character, and you'll learn by meeting different types of people. Stay in circulation as long as possible.

5. One little eye-catcher which could be placed on school book and the home mirror is "Do It Now". Procrastination will make you lethargic. Whenever a task is postponed two or three times it becomes more of a chore.

6. If you are a radio listener, do your manicure and pedicure while you listen to your favorite mystery drama or comedian. These and other little grooming tasks such as mending, darning and ironing can be accomplished while your radio keeps you amused.

7. That job for next summer will be easier to locate if you work on it now in your spare time. Write to firms near your house or in the town or village you'd like to work and inquire as to the possibilities of employment, requesting an application.

8. Idle hands can get into mischief. Learn to knit, crochet or sew. Take up a hobby — you might find you're interested enough to make it your life's work.

9. The room was decorated with balloons and pink and white streamers where refreshments were served by the hostess with the assistance of Carolyn Burns to the prize winners and Sheila and Linda Reeser, Carolyn Jean Burns, Diana and Connie Crabtree, Nancy Thomas, Cheryl Clay and Joyce Ann Quincel.

Also invited to the affair were Mrs. Fred Bowsler, Mrs. Clarence Wardell, Mrs. Robert Reeser, Mrs. James Crabtree, and Mrs. Earl Rutherford.

Games were played and prizes awarded Beverly Lutz, Julia Bowsler, Patty Quincel and Cathy Wardell.

Paralysis Fails To Disrupt Birth

VENTURA, Calif., Jan. 5.—A woman who has been paralyzed from the waist down since her spinal cord was severed in an auto crash four years ago has given birth to a baby.

Her physician, Dr. Harry E.
Barker, performed a Caesarean section.

The child, a 7-pound, 3-ounce
boy, was born to Anna, Caterlin,
21-year-old wife of an oil field worker. Half an hour after the birth the mother was sitting up in bed reading birth announcements. No anesthetic was necessary because of Mrs. Caterlin's paralytic condition.

Junior Tournament Due To Begin Jan. 26 In Walnut Township Gym

Pickaway County's 1952 junior high school basketball tournament will begin Jan. 26 in Walnut Township school gymnasium.

The Walnut school was picked as the site for this year's junior tournament Thursday during a coaches'-superintendents' meeting in Pickaway Township school.

Williamsport school offered the lowest bid for the junior contest, offering its new gymnasium facilities for $140. Walnut was second with $149.95 while Jackson, customary site of the contest because of its central location, was third with $150.

The schools voted, however, to take this year's tourney to Walnut.

JACKSON AND Darby Township are to begin the 1952 junior tournament at 1:30 p. m. Jan. 26, while Ashville will meet Muhlenberg at 2:30 p. m. and Atlanta will tackle Pickaway at 3:30 p. m.

Evening games on the opening day of the tourney call for Scioto, last year's champion, to meet Monroe at 6:30 p. m.; New Holland vs. Harrison Township at 7:30 p. m.; and Wayne vs. Washington at 8:30 p. m.

The Harrison Township entry is a combination team from South Bloomfield and Duval elementary schools. Neither school would have been able to enter a team separately.

Drawing first-round byes in the junior classic were Williamsport and the host Walnut team. Both teams will play Jan. 28 in the quarter-finals of the 14-team test.

A feature of the junior tourney will be the foul-shooting contest, to be directed by Dale Rockhold and Bob O'Brien.

Each of the teams in the tourney may have one player enter the foul-shooting contest. Each contestant will be permitted to shoot several warmup shots, then toss 25 straight at the bucket for record.

The player who makes the largest number of free-throws in his 25 attempts will take the contest title and earn a trophy.

Prizes for the junior eliminations will be 25 cents for children, 40 cents for adults.

Churchill's Ancestors Did Well In America

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—(AP)—A round-faced, cigar-smoking statesman is scheduled to return today to the nation some of his ancestors fought to found.

His mother's family came to the United States from France—Huguenots seeking sanctuary to practice their religion. Five of them fought with Washington during the Revolutionary War.

His grandfather, an upstate New York farmboy, was a Rochester newspaper publisher who struck it rich in Wall Street. A street bearing his name strings through the populous Bronx. A park is named after him in Yonkers.

The visitor's mother, an international beauty and belle of the eighties, is still remembered in New York, Paris and London. She was born in Brooklyn almost a century ago.

The man himself? Winston Churchill, prime minister of Great Britain.

His grandfather, Leonard Jerome, grew up as a farm boy in Pompey, near Syracuse, N. Y. He clerked in the village store, studied and then practiced law. After becoming owner of the Rochester Daily American, Jerome dipped into politics.

HE DID WELL and when Millard Filmore became President, he plucked a modest political plum with appointment as U. S. consul in Trieste. In 1854 just as the family was about to leave on his tour of European duty, his daughter, Jennie, was born in Brooklyn.

Four years later, Jerome returned home and began to speculate in Wall Street. Eventually he struck it rich and became a millionaire.

Jerome spent his money lavishly. He was a founding father of American horse racing and helped finance Belmont race track. Jerome Avenue in New York's Bronx County and Jerome Park in Yonkers, N. Y., were named in his honor. He built a private skating rink for his daughter which he called "Jennie's playground."

With her mother and an elder sister, Jennie went to live in France in her teens. They glimpsed the court life of Napoleon III and Eugenie and then moved to England because of the Franco-Prussian war. Mrs. Jerome took a house called Rosetta Cottage on the fashionable Isle of Wight.

It was at a ball given in the Royal Yacht Squadron Castle that 19-year-old Jennie met Lord Randolph Churchill, a younger son of the seventh duke of Marlborough. He proposed and was accepted four days later. However, both families objected to the match: the Jeromes moved back to Paris. A year later the young couple was married in the British embassy in the French capital.

Young Lady Churchill soon became a popular hostess in London, and was an important assistant in her husband's political career. Winston Churchill was born in Blenheim Palace in 1874.

Bulkley Named 'Favorite Son'

COLUMBUS, Jan. 5.—(AP)—Former U. S. Sen. Robert J. Bulkley of Cleveland will be Ohio Democrats' "favorite son" candidate for the presidential nomination at the party's national convention in Chicago.

Bulkley announced his candidacy in Cleveland saying he had the support of Albert A. Horstman of Dayton, national committeeman, and Eugene Hanhart of Columbus, state Democratic chairman.

The "favorite son" tag has been offered to Gov. Frank J. Lausche, but the governor declined the honor.

Congressman Is Opposed To Clinton Base

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—(AP)—Strong opposition is developing here against moving a proposed Air Force training station from Greater Cincinnati Airport in Boone County, Ky., to Clinton County Air Base near Wilmington, O.

Rep. Spence (D-Ky.), who said he is strongly opposed to the plan, outlined the situation to President Truman Friday, but received no promise from the President to act one way or the other.

Congress has appropriated $2,107,000 for the training center at Greater Cincinnati Airport, which is just across the Ohio river from Cincinnati.

Spence contends the appropriation was made specifically for a training center at Greater Cincinnati Airport and that moving the station to Wilmington some 50 miles away would be illegal unless new legislation were passed.

The Clinton County Air Base now is being used by a training unit which moved in two months ago to reactivate the World War II base. The all-weather flying division of the Air Force used Wilmington to conduct its experiments for several years. This unit is now stationed at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base near Dayton, about 30 miles from Wilmington.

Friday, Ranker had his first case of 1952. It was an intoxication charge against the same Albert Richards. In each instance the punishment had been a fine of $25 and costs, but Squire Ranker said there would be a jail sentence if it happens again in 1953.

Church Has 2 Clerics, But Each Banned

YOUNGSTOWN, Jan. 5.—(AP)—There's no shortage of priests at the Nativity of Christ Russian Orthodox Church in Youngstown. They have two. But, neither is allowed to preach or celebrate church sacraments.

The predicament stems from a church squabble that began Oct. 23 when several parishioners led the Rev. Constantine Kassatkin from the church as he was preparing to preach his Sunday sermon. The

Rev. Peter Vederko was named in place of Rev. Mr. Kassatkin.

Then the congregation decided to vote to settle finally who the church priest would be. Father Kassatkin won 41-34.

That should have settled it—but it didn't. Father Kassatkin had been deposed by the archbishop of the church in the U. S. The deposition meant he no longer was a clergyman.

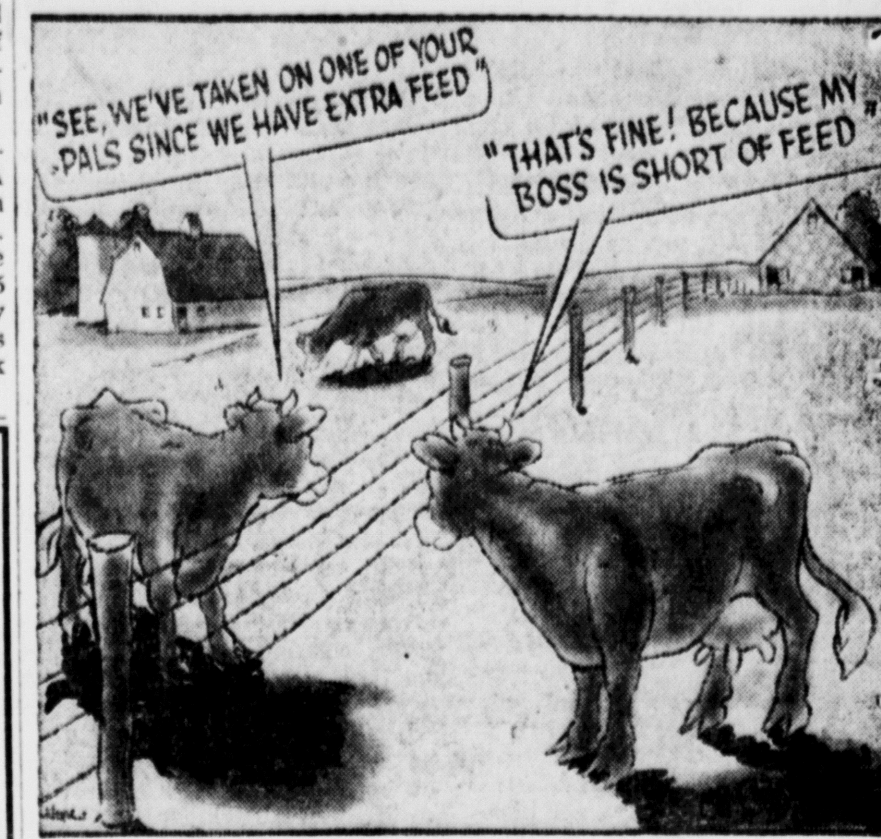

So, neither he nor Father Vederko can preach in the church. A court injunction granted last month prevents the latter from doing so.

Pending a final decision of the case in court Monday, the 115 church-goers have been served by two other priests, one of whom has been flying here from New York every week.

House Slowly Inches Toward Fall Over Cliff

OAKLAND, Calif., Jan. 5.—(AP)—A two-story house is slowly slipping down a crumbling Oakland hillside and is on the verge of toppling over a steep bluff onto an apartment building.

Seven families were hurriedly moved out of endangered apartments at the base of the bluffs. And the house owners, Mr. and Mrs. Morton J. Kramer, quit their home.

The impending crash of the $16,000 house recalled the utter ruin only a few weeks ago of a $35,000 house that crashed down a rain sodden hill in San Francisco.

In Oakland, city engineers said the hill might have become so soft from recent heavy rains that it was disintegrating.

Or it might have been disturbed by recent excavations that slashed a 40 foot bluff only 60 feet to the rear of the house. Another possible explanation was that the hill might have been cracked by a mild earthquake recently.

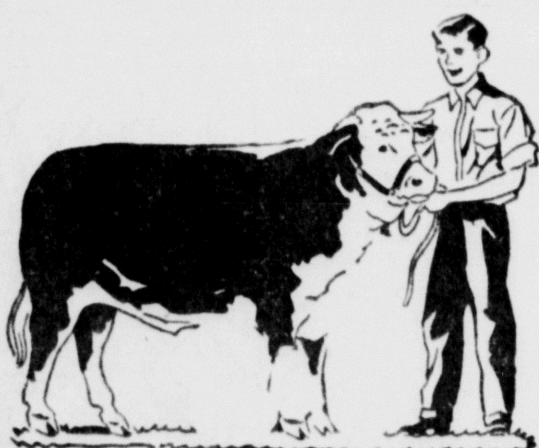

"There's one thing for sure," said Assistant City Engineer Earl Buckingham. "Another heavy rain will most likely send the house down."

It seemed inevitable that the house eventually would make the plunge unless some means is found of shoring up the hill, or moving the house to a safer location.

Church Has 2 Clerics, But Each Banned

YOUNGSTOWN, Jan. 5—(AP)—There's no shortage of priests at the Nativity of Christ Russian Orthodox Church in Youngstown. They have two. But, neither is allowed to preach or celebrate church sacraments.

The predicament stems from a church squabble that began Oct. 28 when several parishioners led the Rev. Constantine Kassatkin from the church as he was preparing to preach his Sunday sermon. The

Rev. Peter Vederko was named in place of Rev. Mr. Kassatkin.

Then the congregation decided to vote to settle finally who the church priest would be. Father Kassatkin won 41-34.

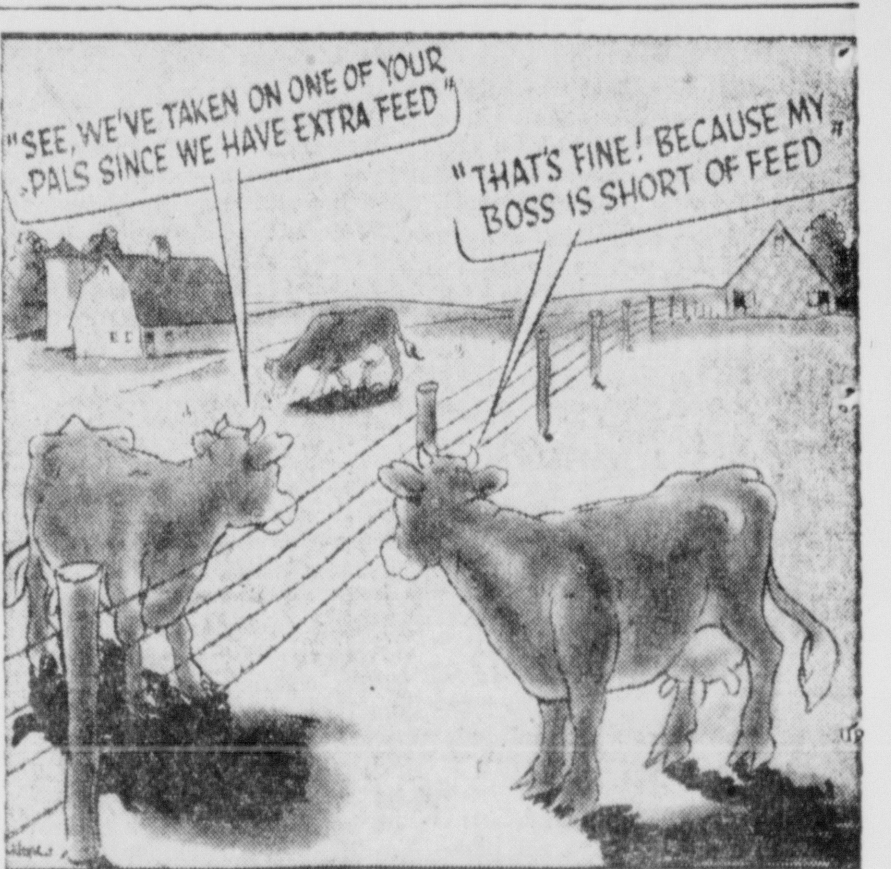

That should have settled it—but it didn't. Father Kassatkin had been deposed by the archbishop of the church in the U. S. The deposition meant he no longer was a clergyman.

So, neither he nor Father Vederko can preach in the church. A court injunction granted last month prevents the latter from doing so.

Pending a final decision of the case in court Monday, the 115 church-goers have been served by two other priests, one of whom has been flying here from New York every week.
